Marching - Large Scale Abstracts

This opening section contains large non-objective large scale abstract paintings. They emerge from what could be described as action painting. Acrylic paint is applied using the feet and sometimes fingers of the artist. Layers of paint on the canvas are built up by stepping onto the palette, and on to the canvas.

The following pieces are somewhere between sculpture and abstract painting. They have a genuine three dimensional surface, highlights and shadows are formed in a manner unlike a flat canvas. Consequently, these pieces change form as the viewer changes their viewpoint.
